ZUNI

Many chapters of the bloody history of conquest were written in the beautiful Zuni-Cibola country where stands the surviving pueblo of the Zuni Indians — largest of the United States. Today's visitors are more welcome than were the Conquistadores and anyone fortunate enough to visit here during a Zuni ceremonial is invited to witness some of the most ancient of tribal dances.

AMERICA'S TRIBUTE TO

The Inter-tribal Indian Ceremonial has devoted its efforts to the preservation of Indian cultures, arts, and crafts since its founding in 1922. Annually, starting the second Thursday in August, more than 20 tribes and thousands of visitors converge on Gallup to witness and to participate in this world-renowned event. It is rightly called "America's Tribute to the American Indian."

The dance program seen by visitors is performed with all the dignity

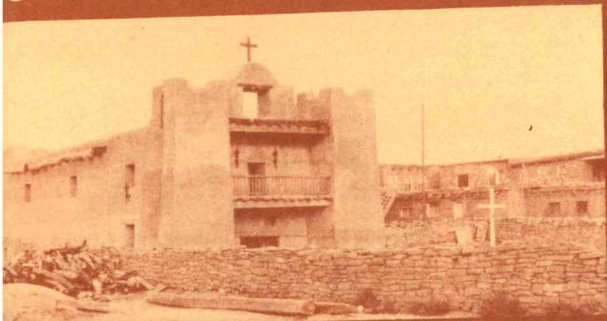

NAVAJOLAND

North and west of Gallup lies the largest Indian Reservation in the United States. Visitors are welcome to visit this scenic and historic land where dwell more than 90,000 Navajos. Numerous parks and camping areas are set aside for the convenience of the visitor to Navajoland, USA.

ONQUISTADORES

Two years before the founding of Jamestown and 15 years before the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock, Don Juan de Onate carved the first of many inscriptions on a gigantic autograph album — Inscription Rock. Much of this history of the exploration and settling of the West is recorded here in terse notations: "Passed by here ..." conquistadores, cavalry troops, wagon trains, traders and settlers. There is much to see in the Zuni-Cibola Country — ancient ruins, pueblos, caves of perpetual ice, volcanic remains and rare scenic beauty.

and pageantry prescribed by tribal custom, staying within the bounds of respect for the religious beliefs and ceremonies of our First Americans. The participants themselves choose the dances which they perform. An exhibit hall is established to display the best works of Indian silversmiths, stone-setters, weavers, potters, basketmakers, artists, etc. Afternoons are devoted to rodeos and traditional Indian games. You'll Like The Indian Country

Stand tall, mister, you're in big country ... where there is room for tallness. Breathe deeply, friend, the air is good ... it has nourished the earliest civilizations of the western world. Walk proudly, amigo, you are following the footsteps of greatness ... of the Spanish Conquistadores, of proud Indian warriors, of frontier cavalymen and sturdy pioneers.

Bring along your camera. Your lens can capture the beauty of the Red Rocks of Gallup — landmarks for westward bound wagon trains ... of El Morro, the famous Inscription Rock ... of the Zuni Pueblo, sole surviving of the Seven Golden Cities of Cibola ... of Canyon de Chelly, site of the last stand of the Navajo against Kit Carson's troops and shelter for cliff-dwelling Indians of an even earlier age ... of Chaco Canyon, most extensive Indian ruins of the United States ... of stately Ponderosa Pines and wind-twisted pinon ... of Zuni silversmiths and Navajo weavers ... of awesome canyons and wind-sculptured peaks ... of Hopi mesas and Sacred Mountain of the Zuni ... nature carved spires of Monument Valley.

Linger awhile. Drink of the bigness, the stillness, the greatness of an America yet unspoiled. Take home with you the unhurried pace of ... the Indian Country.

TOURING HINTS ...

1. SCARE REPAIRS. Have at least two reputable dealers recommend repairs or replacement parts before buying, i.e., generators, tires, water pumps, batteries, etc.
2. EIGHT HOURS is a full work day. Driving is work. To drive longer reduces your reflex efficiency rapidly.
3. HIGHER ALTITUDES affect both you and your car. Both become sluggish. Expect it and reduce your speeds accordingly. Slow down ... see our country.
4. STOP FREQUENTLY. Long stretches of straight road causes sluggishness, loss of efficient driving, and road hypnosis.
5. DRIVE DEFENSIVELY. Watch the other driver. There is little pleasure in being DEAD right!
